FINAL THOUGHTS...

In addition to taking traditional courses or working on Law Review or the Moot Court Board, students can earn academic credit through externships and by doing supervised Independent Research. The following is a brief summary of the rules relating to Externships and Independent Research:

Externships: Externships are a great way to turn your practical experience into academic credit. Any student enrolled in an upper division course may earn externship credit for legal work related to the subject matter of the course. The externship credit will only be given for work performed during the same semester as the related course. Enrollment for externship credit must be approved by the faculty member teaching the course and the Director of Clinical Education. An externship may be supervised only by a full-time faculty member.

Although the student has the responsibility to arrange the externship, the Office of Clinical Programs and the Office of Career Services can assist in locating and contacting a suitable placement. The placement may be with a private law office, the court system, the law office of a public interest or government employer, must be supervised by an admitted attorney or judge, and may not involve any compensation. The faculty member teaching the related course must determine whether the externship will entail substantive legal experiences appropriate for academic credit, will be relevant to the course and whether adequate supervision of the student's work will be provided. The student must secure a written description of the placement and the duties to be performed from the attorney or judge supervising the placement. The faculty member will specify for each student the criteria necessary to complete the externship and receive externship credits. These may include such requirements as maintaining a journal of activities, making oral or written presentations to the class, periodic meetings with the faculty member, submission of work performed in the placement, submission of other written reports or papers regarding placement activities and/or other similar requirements.

While externships ordinarily earn two (2) credits, the Director of Clinical Programs may approve one (1), two (2), or three (3) credits depending on the number of hours of work required by the placement. Ordinarily, three (3) credits will only be awarded for an organized summer externship program which contains an educational or training component. The externship may be graded on a Pass/No credit basis at the option of the faculty member teaching the related course. Unless extraordinary circumstances exist, externship credits will not be approved during the same semester in which the student is enrolled in a clinical course. Externship credits count as clinical credits. Clinical credits may not exceed fifteen percent of the total semester hours comprising a student's course of study, or no more than 13 credits toward the eighty-eight (88) required for graduation.

Independent Research: Full-time students in good academic standing may register for Independent Research only after successful completion of all first year full-time required courses (Legal Methods I & II, Torts I & II, Contracts I & II, Civil Dispute Resolution & Procedure I & II, Criminal Law I & Property I). This means that full-time students may not register for Independent Research until the summer following their first year. Part-time students in good academic standing are eligible to register for Independent Research after successful completion of the following required courses in their first 3 semesters: Legal Process I & II, Contracts I & II, Torts I & II, Civil Dispute Resolution & Procedure I & II and Criminal Law I. Part-time students may not register for Independent Research until the spring semester of their second year. Independent Research involves a semester-long research and writing project under the regular review and supervision of a full-time faculty member. Independent Research normally carries two (2) credits, but may be done for one (1) or three (3) credits, depending on the subject matter and the length of the paper. As a general guideline, twenty (20) pages exclusive of footnotes should be submitted for each credit. Students may not register for more than one Independent Research project in a semester. No more than six (6) credits of Independent Research may be credited toward the degree requirement. Eligible students may register for Independent Research during registration; an Independent Research Proposal, signed by the supervising faculty member, must be filed with the Registrar's Office (Room 305, x7040) by the last day of the drop/add period.

Students on academic probation are not eligible to register for or participate in IR. Students placed on academic probation after registering for IR (but before completing the project) will receive a grade of "Incomplete" and will not be eligible to receive a grade or academic credit until they are off probation
